Developed an Automatic Subtitle Generator Application

Developed an Android application which generates subtitles for the input video using speech recognition and speech to text conversion. The project aims at reducing the overhead of downloading the subtitles from the internet each time the user plays a video. The process of automatic subtitle generation requires separating the audio from the video followed by fragmenting the audio into segments and then the subtitle is generated for each segment. The subtitle generator works with any of the available formats and generates the subtitle with maximum accuracy possible. With a negligible initial delay, the subtitle file is generated as a conventional srt file and is stored in a special file created.
